Chapter 1 by Denny/Carter The Dedenne

This is the story of a civilization that lived many thousands of years in the future where an enormous volcano called Kanus has burst its top and blocked out the sun. Humanity has reverted to primal instincts.

Prologue:

We have heard stories of a time, a time long ago. A time where our ancestors lived in. The world was warmer, most people were civilized, no-one had to hunt, because they got food from markets and everything was peaceful.

We heard this story many times in school, of a strange mountain we just called Kanus. As the legend goes, everything lived in harmony, that was until Kanus became angry...

As the story went, Kanus' fury blocked the orb in the sky, never to show again. That's when things got bad.... We were plunged into a new age. An age of darkness, an age of ice, an age of predators. The smoke was thought to clear up, but it never did.

The story went, through the cold, we saw creatures thought to be extinct for millions of years. We fled to caves, and created new civilization, never to see the light of day again.
